His loyalty extended to his relationships, where he was a trusted and steadfast friend to many. Beyond his family and friendships, Frank was a successful business owner and a man of many talents.

He was an accomplished golfer, boater, and fisherman who loved to travel with his wife, immersing himself in diverse cultures, savoring new cuisines, and finding joy in stargazing and soul-searching. He had a unique ability to make people feel heard and valued, offering wise counsel that touched many lives.

A star on both the football and lacrosse fields, EA was where he formed lifelong friendships, influenced by his beloved Coach Meehan, who was instrumental in shaping his athletic journey. Frank continued his education at Dickinson College, where he thrived as a student-athlete, excelling in the classroom and on the field.
